Leyden Broadband Committee

While WiredWest and MBI continue to work through their differences, Leyden's Broadband Committee has been working to also explore another option. We are evaluating the feasibility of building our own independent network.

Such a network would be owned solely by Leyden's Municipal Lighting Plant (MLP) which was created in early 2015. Once built, we would then need someone to manage it for us, and are exploring the possibility of contracting with Greenfield's non-profit Municipal Lighting Plant (MLP) to be our network manager. Basically, the Greenfield MLP would be our internet service provider and would handle the administrative and maintenance needs for our network. Greenfield will be building out its own network in 2016, and by the end of the year, expects to have 17 employees, 60+ miles of Greenfield roads wired, and the ability to bring broadband internet, and phone to its 18,000 residents. The Committee has now met twice with the consulting group that is managing

WiredWest

Have any of you ever traveled parts of old Rt. 66, or Rt.1 from Fort Kent, ME to Key West, FL? In fact, you don't have to go any further than the towns bordering Rt. 91 to see what a major highway does to areas that once thrived nearby. Seven or eight years ago, groups of us began meeting in all our western MA towns, aware that we were in danger of becoming like those towns that once thrived before a highway came in and re-directed their futures. We all appreciate driving on those highways, but we can still note what was lost. It was as stark a reality as eastern MA having electricity and western MA being still in the dark. We did not want to become an area that people would one day drive through and remember that a beautiful little town named Leyden was once here, and further west, there were Colrain, Rowe, Heath and so on, all gone.

We realized that we needed the advantage of a digital highway that comes right to our homes, keeping us vital while allowing us to live in these beautiful towns. We didn't need to die. In order to do that, members of all our 45 western towns began the process of forming what would become WiredWest, created by our towns and for our towns to bring the best broadband available in the most cost effective way, while

Robertson Memorial Library

Library Hours: Monday 1:00 – 6:00 PM; Wednesday 1:00 – 6:00 PM, and Saturday 10:00 AM to NOON Phone 773-9334 (Leave a message any time.)

Welcome to 2016! I hope you will include the library in your year's activities!

Great news! We have received a pass to the Francis Clark Art Museum in Williamstown. It is valid for one adult admission per day! It will be valid through December 2016. What a great Christmas present! If you are interested in using it, let me know.

The following came to my attention recently: Leslie Brooks' "Soul Writer" is at the library, so be sure to read it!

"Impressively well written, exceptionally well presented and organized, "Soul Writer" is an extraordinary read from beginning to end that is as insightful as it is informative, as thoughtful as it is thought-provoking. Very highly recommended for community and academic library collections, it should be noted for personal reading lists that "Soul Writer" is also available in a Kindle edition for $6.99.

This review will be archived on our Midwest Book Review website for the next five years at <http://www.midwestbookreview.com>."

Now that our FEE grant has been approved, plans are underway for author Michele Barker to work with fifth and sixth graders at PRES. Multiple copies of "A Difficult Boy" have arrived at the school, and students will soon begin their reading, discussing, and reacting to the characters, action, and themes and writing strategies employed therein. I've been busy locating materials for students to conduct research about the setting of the novel prior to their reading it, and I may even visit the class to help them get started. Fun! I'll keep you posted. It's really great that the town library and the town's elementary school have such a strong relationship.

There is a popular saying that 'less is more,' and that seems to be true of this library. We have less space than most buildings in the state, but we have more 'good' stuff than many libraries that are much larger! The larger libraries are more than happy to lend materials to us, too, so we are a great source of books, CDs, and DVDs. Make a New Year's resolution to visit the RML once a week. You won't regret it!

WiredWest

keeping the money generated in our towns. That has been our whole reason for existing, and it is the only entity involved in this project made up completely of representatives of our western MA towns.

There are those in our towns who think that the money we have pledged to spend goes to WiredWest, and think that WiredWest will make our taxes go up. None of that money goes to WiredWest. Both Mass. Broadband Institute (MBI), which will actually be doing the building of the network, and WiredWest did very difficult cost analyses, involving counting every utility pole, every residence, every mile of road, every business in western MA to come up with estimates of what it will cost our towns to be connected. WiredWest's commitment to this project is to keep it as efficient and as cost effective as possible, working together as adjacent towns. For instance, West Leyden and East Colrain can be thought of as a single community. It doesn't make sense to require that each part should be served by a different network. Some parts of the Franklin County town of Rowe would best be served by connections through Berkshire County. We see ourselves as part of a regional, cooperative solution.

MBI and WiredWest have had some significant differences as to how this is to proceed, as most of you probably know. We are working very hard to iron out those differences and to work together more smoothly. WiredWest wants to make sure that the best interests of our towns are served, and will be very much part of the discussions going forward. This is a huge project and there have been and will be bumps in the road that have to be smoothed. But it will happen. It has to happen if we are to survive. I was speaking with another resident of Leyden recently who mentioned that his real concern about taxes was that our population is diminishing. When he moved here, there were more than 800 residents. I think at last count we are under 700 now. That is what will really do us in financially, as fewer of us carry the burden of keeping our towns functioning. Without broadband, that decline is literally inevitable.

Leyden Broadband Committee

Greenfield's buildout to better understand the process and Greenfield's planned network. Lance Fritz and I have also met with Mayor Martin of Greenfield, who is more than willing to work with us if we choose this solution. There are still many issues to be explored, such as our eligibility for state funding, whether we will get true broadband speeds, etc. Keep in mind that this is only one of the options we are exploring and we will keep you posted as they evolve.

This is an extraordinarily complex project and your Committee is doing its best to listen to different points of view while trying to remain objective in order to identify the best solution to bring broadband to Leyden. —Bob Ryan, Chair

Survey Regarding a Grocery Pick-Up Service: In our larger survey last year, many seniors said that a grocery store in Leyden would make their lives easier as they age. In the absence of a store, the COA is contemplating a grocery pick-up service instead for people who can't get out shopping for themselves. Please take a moment to answer the short survey at the end of the newsletter. Your answers will help us figure out if seniors have any interest in such a service and whether they are likely to use it.

Need A Ride? Winter is here, and if you're worried about driving, this is a good time to take advantage of Leyden's free door-to-door transportation service. Call Gilda Galvis (773-7932) for rides to medical appointments, grocery shopping, hairdressers/barbers, etc. Our volunteer drivers include Bill Glabach, Lance Fritz, Jeff Neipp and Dan Galvis. ### Massachusetts laws regarding registration exemptions and farm plates.

Exempt vehicles. G.L. c. 90 S 9 allows specific vehicles to be operated without a registration, including vehicles towed by tow trucks, agricultural vehicles, new cars delivered to dealers, industrial vehicles, golf carts, cemetery vehicles, and earth moving vehicles. In most cases the owner still must maintain some sort of insurance coverage.

This means that if you operate a tractor on a public way you must have insurance, such as an agricultural policy or rider on a home-owners policy. If a tractor is used in commercial ventures such as plowing snow for compensation it must be registered and insured for commercial use unless it is moved by trailer.

General registration vehicles (aka farm plates), G.L. c.90 S 5 allows registrations to be issued to certain businesses (dealers, farmers, contractors, repairmen, and transporters), and the plates that accompany these registrations may be moved from one vehicle to another. Their issuance and use are covered under RMV regulations.

General Distinguishing Registration: Compliance decal must be conspicuously displayed. Except for a dealer any person who owns a vehicle or trailer with a general registration must display a decal showing that a title has been applied for and sales tax has been paid. The decal notes the plate and vehicle identification numbers. Failure to comply with decal requirements would indicate that the vehicle is considered unregistered. Implements of husbandry are exempt from decal requirements.

Farm Plates

The farmer must be engaged in the occupation of farming, including cultivation and tillage of soil, dairying, harvesting of any agricultural or forest products, or raising of livestock, bees, or fur-bearing animals.

Farm plates must be used on vehicles owned by the farmer, but may not be used on any passenger vehicles.

The vehicle must be used for farming activity, and the compliance decal must be displayed, except on an implement of husbandry.

Regarding personal use

A "farm" plate may only be attached to a motor vehicle or trailer if the vehicle is: 1) owned by the farmer; 2) principally used and dedicated to the farming activity; 3) displays the valid Compliance Decal; and 4) is not a passenger vehicle. If the vehicle meets this criteria, then personal use of the vehicle is acceptable, except that a commercial use unrelated to the farming activity is not authorized. This also applies to commercial use unrelated to farming activity of any vehicles owned by the farmer and operated on the farm plates, such as plowing snow for compensation. For this use the vehicle must be registered and insured for commercial use. Plowing snow on the property owned or leased by the farmer is acceptable. Use of a vehicle for other than farming activity constitutes misuse of the general registration plate and the farmer can be cited for same and the Registrar may hold a hearing. Following the hearing the Registrar may suspend or revoke the General Registration Plate(s) if he finds the holder violated the provisions of Chapter 90 s 5 or the Rules and Regulations of the RMV.
